Thousands of men in every walk of life all over the world are playing a desperate game with Death for an opponent. They are playing with an opponent who has every advantage, and the outcome of the game is as certain as Death. The man in any walk of life, who is too hard-worked, too busy, to take care of his health has only himself to blame when the final break-down comes. It is easy to keep health while one has it, but uphill work to win it back when it is lost. A man neglects a slight indigestion. Then his appetite gets poor. That's a trifle and he pays no attention to it. Then he complains of headaches and it is hard to work or think. His sleep becomes restless and he only gets troubled spells of it. He gets nervous and irritable. Everything goes wrong both at home and at business. He persists in paying no attention to his health. Then some day he breaks down. The doctor says nervous prostration or consumption as the case may be. He has been playing a game with death and has been checkmated at the weakest point.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is an unfailing cure for all disorders of the digestion, and the deadly maladies that follow in their train. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder, and nerve tonic. It cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption. It is an unfailing remedy for nervous prostration and exhaustion. Thousands of men have testified to their recovery under its use after all other remedies had failed. All druggists sell it. Do not deal with a druggist who offers you a substitute for he is not only dishonest but willing to sacrifice your health and possibly your life for a few added pennies of profit.

A clear complexion. Any one can have it who keeps the blood pure. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. One is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. Druggists sell them.

THE AGNOSTIC STYLE OF COURTING.

Voiceless earth is the grave of the fair. Sighs for the man's enemy, we see. Shyly shy with a burden of care. Wherefore, then, let moralists rage? Who shall heed their obnoxious alarms While his love lurches fast in his arms?

Past the shadowy mists at the end, Where oblivion mingles, fate, May restore us to sweetheart and friend. But my soul lacketh faith. Let us date Something precious on memory's page In this hour which we steal from old age.

Since it may be this life is the sum Of existence for you and for me, Let us hasten, ere the darkness is to come, Shall engulf us, as ships in the sea; Let the seers seek the spirit divine And do thou, in thy beauty, be mine. —Frank Putnam in Chicago Times-Herald.

THE HIGHEST BIDDER.

It was at Brussels, in the auction rooms at the corner of the streets Leopold and Wiertz, that the incident happened. My friend was an Englishman, but he had lived long in the country and had acquired a taste for the Belgian arts that seemed almost native, and that made him something of a collector. The sale at the rooms was to be very similar to a sale at Sotheby's, and the catalogue referred to original manuscripts and first editions and to a hundred things loved by the curious. My friend was present in the hope of securing some early engravings, and I was with him as part of the idleness of a holiday. We were early, and while waiting the time of the sale we looked together at the catalogue, and he entertained me with talk of this and that entry.

"This number should be interesting," he said, pointing to a line on the first page, "the love letters of Guinevere, our poet of love. Kents' letters, you remember, were sold in London not long ago, and one of your verse makers wrote a lamenting sonnet. Guinevere was not so great a poet as Kents, but his passion for Jetta Teterol was as wildly spoken as the other's for Fanny Brawne. Your verse maker was right. It is hard that because a man has given part of his soul to the world the world should want the whole. But the curious are innocent of modesty, and—yes, the number should be interesting."

"There will be a fight for the letters, you think?" I said.

"Yes, probably. Guinevere has something of a vogue just now. The women are discovering that he wrote as in their best hours they think. And indeed it was a tender, womanly muse. The little man standing by the table—him with the glasses, I mean—will, I think, get them. He is a professor at the university, and doubtless meditates an article in one of the reviews. Himself without sentiment, he will criticize their sentiment. Already he has written more than one unkind thing about the Guinevere morals. The letters will give him yet a new text."

For a moment or two I looked at the professor's hard, thin face and sympathized with the dead poet, then as the auctioneer mounted to his place and commenced the day's sale I turned my eyes to one and another in the room. Mostly the crowd was of men, dealers or chance buyers, but here and there were women with the usual catalogue and pencil, and among them was one whose dress and manner interested me even to curiosity. Near to us she stood, impatiently buttoning and unbuttoning a glove, and I saw that she was pretty, but somewhat too well dressed and somewhat too freely jeweled.

"Do you know," I asked my friend, "who is the girl to our right?"

He looked and slightly shrugged his shoulders and said: "Yes, she is Marie Carbara, one of the actresses at the new theater. She is only a minor actress, but you see her cloak and the brooch clasping it. They are all alive, these pretty singers and dancers. All love the sunshine and the butterfly life. What brings Marie here I do not know, nor what makes her so angry with her glove. The boudoir wants a picture, perhaps. That was very little for the Louis vases. Ah, here are the Guinevere letters. They will fetch more."

The auctioneer spoke of the poet and of his love for Jetta Teterol and of his writings to her. Again I looked around the room to one and another. Many seemed little interested in the bundle of yellow sheets, but a few seemed likely bidders. The professor was listening to the auctioneer's words and smiling as one amused. Other men, who knew less than the professor, were listening with more humility. The girl Marie had ceased to play with her glove and held one hand lightly in the other. A "be girl" looked longer than the men. She had an earnestness of expression that was pretty to see, an earnestness that presently gave me an idea.

"It is not a picture that has brought Mademoiselle Carbara here," I said to my friend. "It is these letters. Look at her."

"She is certainly concerned for them. Perhaps you are right," he replied. "As I said, the women are beginning to read and to love Guinevere, and—yes, perhaps you are right. Still, my man speaks first, and he is not likely soon to give in."

The professor moved his glasses forward a little and said, "Ten francs," and the bidding commenced. "Twenty," said the girl Marie. And I noticed the pleasantness of her voice and was glad my idea had not been wrong. "Thirty," said a man to my left. "Thirty," replied the auctioneer. "Yes, it is a fight," said my friend as ten by ten the offer rose, "but between our two people only. The other is an agent and will presently reach his limit. Indeed, already he seems to have reached it."

"Two hundred," said the girl. "And ten," said the professor. "Two hundred and fifty," said the girl, her cheeks flushing a little. "Three hundred," said the professor, his mouth hardening.

The third bidder had become silent, and the fight was now clearly between the two. At the end of a table the girl stood, looking earnestly to the auctioneer and the bundle of letters before him; at the other the man, looking angrily at the girl. Within me was a hope that she, and not he, would be the last to speak.

"Four hundred,"

"Five hundred,"

"Six hundred,"

There was a movement of interest in the room. The offers were not large—a picture had just before been sold for several thousands, but they seemed large for the few sheets of faded writing. They came, too, the one more quickly following another than in the other sales. There was no delay of calculation and doubt. The excitement of those who watched was very natural.

"A thousand,"

"Fifteen hundred,"

"Carbara wins," said my friend. "The professor will go but little higher. How angry the man looks."

"Two thousand,"

"Two thousand five hundred," said the girl.

"Two thousand five hundred," said the auctioneer and waited for an advance.

"Two thousand five hundred," he repeated, looking questioning at the professor.

A shake of the head was the reply, and people knew that the fight was over. With an assumption of indifference the professor moved his glasses yet more forward and began anew to turn the pages of his catalogue.

"Two thousand five hundred," said the auctioneer again, and in a moment after the sale was finished. Jetta Teterol's letters had passed to Marie Carbara, and Jetta Teterol had been dead 100 years.

One of the assistants took the bundle to carry it to a side room, and the auctioneer began to speak of the next number, and again, as if in impatience, the girl fell to buttoning and unbuttoning her glove. But suddenly, still in impatience, she ceased, and, putting out her hands, said:

"Pardon, but if I may I will have them now. Will you give them me, please? Here are notes for the amount—two of a thousand and one of five hundred. There is no objection?"

"There is no objection," replied the auctioneer smilingly. "It is not quite usual, but there can be no objection." Then to his clerk he said: "Take the notes, please, and give Mlle. Carbara the letters. Mlle. Carbara we all know and admire. Certainly she may have them."

As the girl took the bundle and loosened the string which bound it there was probably none in the room who was not gazing at her. Most, like myself, were amazed at her eagerness. One or two were a little contemptuous. The professor was resentfully frowning. Nearer to her than some I stood, and so better than some I can tell what in the next minutes she said and did.

There were perhaps 20 or 30 letters. The uppermost one she unfolded and read. Quickly from beginning to end she read it, then placed it again with the rest, then said, as if to herself:

"His heart is a suspended harp, which, if one touches it, responds," and then looked irresolutely from side to side.

But little time did she so stand. "Pardon," she said and stepped past the man next to her, and "Pardon" again and stepped past me to the room corner, where was a dully burning fire. As I moved to give her space I began to understand what now she would do and wondered and watched.

First she took the letter she had read and glanced at it again, and then with sudden movement thrust it among the others. Then, one by one, she took the others and dropped them, so that one by one they touched the flame and were alight. Then, when the last yellow sheet had burned to blackness, with her foot she crushed it and the rest to powder, then smiled and turned toward the door.

There had been silence during the time—it was but a minute or two that this was doing—and now as she stepped across the floor there was whispering only. But as she neared the door men began to understand what she had done and they had seen. There had been sentiment, there had been poetry, the an-

CURED

Refused Without Proposing.

Few women outside of royalties ever "popped the question" to a man, and perhaps only one has had the experience of being rejected by a man without having proposed to him. There was one, and the Hon. L. A. Tollemache tells the story in his "Personal Memoir of Benjamin Jowett," master of Balliol, Oxford.

The master's personality was potent and penetrating, and good women felt its fascination. An undergraduate was all at Balliol college, and his sister, coming to Oxford to nurse him, was invited by Dr. Jowett to stay at his house. She received from him the utmost kindness and attention, and when leaving said, with much deprecation, that she would venture to ask a very great favor. She again hesitated. The master grew uneasy and looked interrogative.

"Will you marry me?" at last she asked.

He paced up and down, blushed deeply, and replied, "That would not be good either for you or for me."

"Oh, oh!" exclaimed the young lady, blushing even more deeply. "I meant to say I am going to be married and would you perform the service?" She had then refused, poor girl, without having proposed.

A Painful Awakening.

"Algernon, dear, how much did you pay the preacher who married us? I want to enter it as the first item in our family expense book."

"Great Scott, Esmeralda! I supposed your father had settled that,"—Chicago Tribune.

Precious Means.

Almost any dish which had to recommend itself to the palate, indigestibility, and, to our way of thinking, nastiness, was sure to take with the Roman epicure. And if he were unable to make it costly any other way he would add powdered precious stones or gold dust. Nero dined on one occasion from a peacock which was sprinkled with diamond dust, and specimens of that bird dressed with gold or with crushed pearls were by no means a rarity at the triclinia of the moneyed Romans. A dish of parrots' tongues was a great delicacy. But a dish of parrots' tongues which had been capable, when in their proper place, of framing words, was of almost incalculable value, which increased in a direct ratio with the vocabularies of the defunct parrots.

Another bird for which the Roman epicure was in the habit of paying fabulous prices was the phœbeoptix, which is believed to have been the ptarmigan. It had its home in the most northerly parts of Scotland and Norway, and as this made it hard to get at, the Romans appreciated it all the more and put it in the same rank with ostriches, buzzards and peacocks. The tongues of these birds were specially prepared, together with the brains, and took the place which a hors d'œuvre would now take. —New York Post.

Her Point of View.

They were discussing the construction of a new gown.

"From a hygienic point of view and merely as a matter of health," suggested the dressmaker, "I think it should be made"

The haughty beauty stopped her by a gesture.

"Hygienic point of view!" she exclaimed. "Matter of health! What has that to do with it? When I want health, I will go to a doctor. When I want style, I come to you. We will now eliminate all absurdities and discuss this purely from a common sense standpoint. Will it be fashionable and becoming?" —Philadelphia Times.

A Sportsman's Gun Rack.

Sportsmen have their trophies mounted in all sorts of fashions. One way of using a deer's feet is to have them mounted for a gun rack. The rack is of oak or some other fine wood, in which the deer's feet are secured, projecting horizontally for the gun to rest upon and with the boots turned up, so that the gun cannot slip off. Sometimes such gun racks are made with a simple pair of feet for one gun; sometimes to hold two guns, and the deer's heads are mounted above, as a trophy for fishing tools. —New York Sun.

THE BIRDS OF BETHLEHEM

I heard the birds of Bethlehem sing. Their voices were sweeter than the priests'.

I heard the birds of Bethlehem sing. Unbidden in the churchly feasts.

They clung and sung on the swinging chain. High in the dim and incensed air. The priests, with reputations vain, Chanted a never ending prayer.

So bell and bird and priest I heard. But voice of bird was most to me. It had no ritual, no word. And yet it sounded true and free.

I thought child Jesus, were he there, Would love the singing birds the best And clutch his little hands in air And smile upon his mother's breast. —R. W. Guder.

RETIRING THE GREENBACKS.

Cleveland, when President, suggested the idea of retiring the greenbacks from circulation. President McKinley appointed Mr. Gage, a Chicago national banker, Secretary of the Treasury. Mr. Gage voted for President Cleveland and was a firm believer in his financial policy. Now Mr. Gage is preparing a financial measure, which, no doubt, will be satisfactory to Mr. McKinley and to Mr. Cleveland, which he proposes to submit to Congress next winter. To ascertain the opinion of the different bankers he has sent out hundreds of letters to the banks inviting suggestions for placing the currency on a sound basis.

Secretary Gage's scheme embraces the gradual retirement of greenbacks and the substitution of national bank notes therefor, allowing the banks to issue to the full limit of their securities, instead of 90 per cent as at present, reducing the tax on bank circulation to  $\frac{1}{4}$  of 1 per cent, and limiting the denominations of all paper money to \$10.

The Secretary has already commenced to put his scheme in practice by retiring greenbacks, so far as is possible under the present law. He is locking up in the Treasury all greenbacks and treasury notes and on June 1st there was held in the Treasury about $60,000,000 of these notes.

That is the relief the present Administration proposes to afford the people in the way of currency reform. Greenbacks, which cost the people nothing, except the paper they are printed on, are to be withdrawn from circulation, and national bank notes, secured by bonds on which the people pay interest, are to be issued instead. And yet, there are people who pretend to believe that there is a difference between the financial policy of Mr. Cleveland and Mr. McKinley, but those people are generally politicians, who know better.

NOT WHAT IT WAS CRACKED UP TO BE.

During the last campaign the country was informed that all that was needed to bring prosperity was confidence. Tom Reed, the Czar of the House, was the great disciple of that theory and he preached his doctrine amid the wild acclaim of Republicans, from Maine to California and back again. But since the party has been installed in power, a change of front has been noticeable, until confidence is referred to only in connection with the genuine confidence game. Yesterday, in Washington, the information was given out that Secretary Gage was preparing a financial measure to be submitted to Congress in which he would advocate the increase of the circulating medium by the granting of greater privileges to banks in the issuing of paper money. The greenbacks are to be retired. They are not controlled by the banks, therefore, they must go. But instead of greenbacks, bank notes are to be issued, and a greater circulation than we now have is to be built upon the paper of the National Banks. So after all the acknowledgment is made that more money is needed and not confidence, and the money is to be worth less than 50 cents on the dollar, in fact, as worthless in "intrinsic value" as paper. In theory and in practice Republicanism is proving anything but identical.—Ogden Standard.

In the case of the United States vs. the North Bloomfield Gravel Mining Company, Judge Ross of the United States District Court rendered a decision of considerable importance to miners. The Court held that the government had absolute power to regulate mining, and as the act involved requires mine owners to acquire a certificate from the Debris Commission that the operation of the particular mine would not injure the navigability of the river, the Court, therefore, granted the injunction asked for delay until the mining company obtains such certificate from the Debris Commission.

SENATORS clash on the tariff. Every Senator wants the particular industries of his section favored by tariff legislation, and as the east has heretofore had a monopoly of that business Senators from that section do not like to have western men follow their example in that respect. Massachusetts does not want a tariff on hides and its Senators are incensed at western men for insisting that hides shall be protected.

CHARLES BARBER, a Washington attorney, shot his sweetheart, Miss Dorothy E. Squires, in the street and then turned the pistol on himself with fatal results. Washington attorneys have a strange way of manifesting their love. In the wild and woolly west instead of shooting his best girl a man would shoot the fellow who attempted to make love to her.

It is believed that Governor Budd will deprive Durrant, pending the action of the Supreme Court of the United States on his appeal, so as to avoid complications in the future. By so doing the Governor will obviate the necessity of having Durrant taken to San Francisco to be resentenced.

Several delegates to the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias, to meet at Elko, will take the train this morning and this evening for that town.

TELEGRAPHIC NOTES.

The fight between Maher and Sharkey at New York last night was declared a draw in the seventh round. The police interfered and the fight was brought to a sudden termination.

A tramp that assaulted Mrs. Anna Cards, a highly respected lady of Williamsburg, Ohio, came near being lynched yesterday. Constable Buckner had all he could do to save his life.

The Senate was occupied yesterday in considering minor matters and the discussion of the tariff bill was resumed on the agricultural schedule. Committees are at work on the various schedules.

Mr. Calhoun, the Commissioner to Cuba, had a conference with President McKinley yesterday. Later he paid a visit to the State Department with his secretary, and had a consultation with Assistant Secretary Day.

The funeral of the three firemen who perished in the fire of last Saturday at San Francisco took place yesterday. Mayor Phelan and the city officials nearly all turned out. The ceremonies at the church were very impressive.

Under Sheriff Smith of Beaverhead county, Mont., arrived at Dillon yesterday with the body of William Christenson, who was shot while trying to escape arrest for criminal assault on Lena Fredricson, a young girl. He was the terror of the county and possessed considerable property.

Durrant's attorneys are now relying on a writ of habeas corpus which they hope to secure in the Supreme Court of the United States in August. It is claimed that should Warden Hale proceed with the execution on next Friday he would be guilty of "legal" murder. It is believed that Durrant will be reprieved.

The Executive Committee of the National Silver Republican party met at Chicago yesterday and discussed organization. The committee favors immediate organization for the campaign of 1898 and 1900. Senator Teller of Colorado telegraphed, "I am in full sympathy with the expressions of the address. We must unite the silver forces under one banner, thus united victory will be assured in 1900."

The Olinghouse Mining Camp.

The Wadsworth Dispatch reports last Sunday as a live day at that town and the neighboring mining camp of McClaneshurg. A number of Renoitites visited Wadsworth and the mines on Sunday and all were well pleased with what they saw. A four horse stage loaded to the guards was a feature and every private conveyance in town was utilized. Among others were Dave Dyart, T. K. Stewart and E. B. Monroe, the last two gentlemen being surveyors, it was concluded that the party was looking for a location of a townsite and millsite as one of the early possibilities of the new camp.

Some prominent Salt Lake mining men have also spent several days at Wadsworth and McClaneshurg, and their movements and general conversation has been taken as an encouraging indication that they were on the ground for business and would probably be heard from in the near future.

Wherever any work has been done at all pay ore has been found, and in some instances the results obtained have been surprisingly rich. It is believed that within a few weeks, or as soon as facilities can be arranged for developing the claims to advantage that the Olinghouse district will astonish the world.

To Receive Bryan.

In view of the fact that Wm. J. Bryan will pass through this city on the evening of July 21, would it not be the proper thing to call a citizen's meeting and arrange for a reception on the arrival of the train.

He has expressed a desire to meet the people of Nevada as he passes through the State, and the towns east are already making arrangements to give him an ovation. Reno should not be the last to move in this matter. Carson and Virginia are now taking steps to have a special train from those cities, and it is quite probable that several hundred people will arrive from those and intermediate points.

Let someone take the first steps and the balance of the program can soon be arranged. The fact that a large number of people will come from neighboring towns ought of itself to urge Reno to go ahead and do her part.

The JOURNAL will publish a call for a meeting of citizens and do its part in the printing line if a self constituted committee will "open the ball" and get it under way.

District Court.

The Foley estate case occupied the Court and a jury yesterday and it is quite probable that it will continue to do so for several days.

The principal contention now seems to be between Mrs. Oscar Smith and the Eastern heirs, although Mrs. Hartley's attorneys were present and will likely take a hand soon.

During the progress of the case yesterday afternoon a telegram was received, announcing the death of Mrs. Rives, wife of Judge Rives of Eureka. Mrs. Rives is a niece of Hon. Geo. W. Baker, also an intimate friend of Mrs. Oscar Smith. In view of this fact and out of respect to Judge Rives, Judge Mack immediately adjourned court.

The deceased was a daughter of J. H. Reese and sister of Mrs. J. L. Fast, now residents of Alameda. She was well and favorably known in eastern Nevada and her many friends will be pained to hear of her unexpected death.

TOOLS FOR SURGEONS.

Where the Carvers in Human Flesh Find Their Implements.

Every great city has a hundred and one curious businesses and trades, factories, individual callings and shops that seem to bear no special relation to the commerce of every day. It does not seem as if these odd business interests had much to do with the prosperity of the world, or were concerned in it at all. It is typically American that perhaps the most interesting of the strange establishments in New York deals with science and inventive ingenuity.

The building where this curious business is the manufacturing of every sort of surgical instrument and device is lodged in itself one of the strangest in New York. But a few blocks from the city hall, it looks as though the surrounding piles of brick and mortar had squeezed it into half its proper compass. The first floor is a salesroom. The hall floors above are devoted to stock, plan and work rooms. In a little two story building in the yard at the back is the "experimental and repair workshop," where eight to ten nimble fingered mechanics are on hand.

There is here one room where remarkable ideas are born or assume form, each one of them concerning in some way the physical welfare of men. Every inch of its wall is covered with framed photographs of the most famous physicians, past and present, of Europe and America, each bearing an autograph signature, all in frames precisely the same. A large, old fashioned desk stands by the window, piled high with foreign scientific reviews in all languages, catalogues and models in gleaming metal, hard rubber and glass. Here the present controllers of the establishment sit all day, poring over drawings or half designed instruments and studying the suggestions and ideas that scientific and medical men from all ends of the country pour into their ears.

The elder of these men has been at this work for 47 years, and the establishment was not young then. Thousands upon thousands of surgical devices have come forth from it. Four hundred or 500, perhaps 1,000, inventions of real practical value and utility are turned out of this room each year. Doctors write, describing what a certain medical appliance, could it be made thus, might perhaps, probably would, accomplish and forthwith plans are made, and after much study and care the instrument is designed and dispatched.

No charge is made the doctors, nor, on the other hand, do the medical men derive any profit, however successful their idea may work out. The establishment considers it an honor to be applied to, the more times the better, and it knows the reputation of its product is spreading far and wide. Thousands of dollars yearly go out on this continual experimenting. Some of them never return. Even in the event of great success and the discovery of a completely new surgical principle a patent is seldom taken out. The doctor inventor cannot because of medical ethics. The establishment finds it hardly worth its while because of the expense and the small number made of any one instrument.

It is not good to tell a story of the old sort to you and an hour or more in this room and see and hear of the curious things being planned and experimented with. Many can to the laymen fantastic in their uses and the results accomplished with them not to be believed. One instrument of this sort is the bullet probe telephone, with which the modern surgeon, an ordinary telephone receiver strapped to his ear, can hear when his probe touches the bullet in the tissues, a distinct click.

Many of the implements made here have almost revolutionized certain branches of surgery. In a box on the beaped up desk spoken of lay, the last time the writer visited this room, a delicately adjusted, minute instrument, with a scale marked along its length. Its purpose was to make probing in the brain safe beyond a doubt. A probe of any required size fitted into the handle, and as the surgeon gently inserted the tip and went farther and farther within the skull the scale would register the exact energy of the pressure. Beyond a certain point there was danger in penetration. If the scale registered over a certain fraction of an ounce, it proved that the probe had left the track of the bullet and had touched cellular matter.

"The most curious thing I ever made," replied the old instrument maker, repeating the question. "That is a hard one to answer. There have been so many strange things but—yes—I think the most curious was an appliance I designed on the ideas of a doctor somewhere in the southwest for 'sucking' snake bites. It was a little instrument any one could carry around with him, and when set on the wound would, the doctor thought—I don't know, I can't say myself—suck the poison out in short order. I made the instrument according to instructions, and the doctor professed himself well satisfied. Then it worked in actual practice I never heard of."—New York Tribune.

THE INCONSISTENT SEX.

"Dear baby spoke today!" she cried. "He said 'Mamma' as plain as plain could be. And it was sweet his dimpled smile to see And sweet his gurgling baby laugh to hear. Come quick! Perhaps he will again. The dear!"
And, oh, I am so happy!

"Baby is growing big so fast. And, oh,"—the sudden tears gushed to her eyes—
"He'll speak and walk and grow so big and wise—
And love another best and woo and wed And have no longer need of me," she said.
"And I am so unhappy!"
—J. L. Heaton in "The Quilting Bee."

A LESSON IN ECONOMICS.

A Young Woman Gives a Young Man Some Valuable Tips.

Again it is a Washington girl. This time she appears as an angel of economy to a young man who needs that kind of angelic administration about as much as any other young man in the Capital City, and she is just as successful as if she were tramping him under her scornful heel and making him feel how utterly helpless man is in conflict with the irresistible.

"By Jove," he was saying, "this sort of thing is simply intolerable!"
"What sort of thing?" she inquired, with admirable poise.
"Why, I have just had to pay a messenger 40 cents to deliver a note up town for me, and he was gone less than half an hour. It would be cheaper to have hired a cab and horse and driver, and still cheaper to have sent it by mail under a special delivery stamp."

"What was the note?" she asked, womanlike, before she thought.
"A response to an invitation to dinner."

"Forty cents is cheap for a good dinner," she smiled.

"But I couldn't go," he wailed. "It was a declination, and the 40 cents on top of that. Really, though, this messenger service is a rank imposition and should not be tolerated. Twenty-five cents an hour is ample, with short distances at 10 or 15 cents. The convenience is easily worth that, but more than that is plain extortion and the greed of monopolies."

"You have my sympathy. You are the more entitled to it because you don't seem to know any better. Now, why aren't you as bright as a man I know, who hasn't any more money than you have? When he has a note or a book to send to a girl, he doesn't wait 40 cents on a grumbling monopoly—oh, that's what it is," she laughed, as she noted his look of surprise, "we have a call in our house, and I am compelled to use it sometimes—but he does a much better thing. He just adds 10 cents to his 40, slips around to the florist's, gives 50 cents' worth of violets sent to the girl, puts the note in with the flowers, and there you are. See? Oh, 10 cents out, and think how much in—for girls do love flowers, even 50 cents' worth."

The young man began gasping for air.

"Or," she went right on, "if it is the case when flowers are more expensive than messenger service, just substitute candy for flowers. You can get something perfectly lovely for 60 cents, and to add a book or pleasant note to it makes it well worth the girl's kindest thought and your 20 cents extra. Now, is the plan clear to your stupid brain?"

Whether it was or not the young woman that very afternoon received a delightful note of thanks for valuable information, accompanied by a 50 cent bunch of violets from a well known florist.—Washington Star.

Argentine Railroads.

In the Argentine Republic the service of trains is appallingly irregular, chiefly owing to the bad state of the permanent way, which, when once laid, is left to take care of itself. The permanent way in some parts of the line is such a dilapidated condition that most every train is thrown off the track. This astounding fact is contained in a recent report of the railway commission. The rate of traveling, too, is a thing at one spot, on a go as you please local line, no train ever travels more than 2 1/2 miles per hour. One of the monstrosities of the journey by rail is out and taking a quiet stroll along the line, or stopping to pick up a few eggs. There is no fear that the train will catch you up—Harper's Round Table.

Leighton's Punctuality.

One well known and decidedly artistic quality of Lord Leighton was his punctuality. He was once in Damascus and was urged to remain there, but he declined. His reason was that he had to be in London on a certain day because he had made an engagement with his model. A friend was anxious to learn whether Lord Leighton had actually kept his engagement, and he found that when the artist was ascending the staircase straight from Damascus the model was knocking at the door of the studio.—San Francisco Argonaut.
